2. Citations and explanations (Rule 70.7)

The invention concerns a constructional element intended for cogged joining where each of the sidewalls is based on a single wooden or wood-like board with an inner coating of a plastic material. The inside of each board is furnished with ribs to make the side walls dimensionally stable, said ribs being attached to the boards by means of the plastic material. In addition there are attachment means to hold the side walls (structural elements) at a predetermined distance from one another.

The invention also concerns a method for its manufacture, a structural element for a constructional element and a method for the manufacture of such a structural element.

Reference is made to the following documents:

D1: WO 02103128 A1

D2: SE 457456 B

D3: DE 1609586 A1

D4: WO 9530807 A1

The document D1 is regarded as being the closest prior art to the subject-matter of claim 1, and discloses a constructional element intended for cogged joining, comprising two structural elements in the form of side walls each of which being based on two or three wooden board elements. The inside of each board (2, 3) is furnished with ribs (1b) that make the side walls dimensionally stable, said ribs being attached to the board by means of glue, while the constructional element also comprises attachment means (25, 26).

Supplemental Box

In case the space in any of the preceding boxes is not sufficient.

Continuation of: BOX V.

The subject-matter of claim 1 differs from this known D1 in that each of the side walls is based on a single wooden or wood-like board with an inner coating of a plastic material. The plastic coating is a layer that stabilizes the boards and prevents small cracks from growing to larger size and functions also as a moisture barrier that prevents moisture from reaching the insulating material in the elements.

The invention defined in claims 1-25 is not disclosed by document D1.

The cited documents D2 - D4 represent the general state of the art. The invention defined in claims 1-25 is not disclosed by any of these documents.

The cited prior art does not give any indication that would lead a person skilled in the art to the claimed constructional element, method for its manufacture, structural element for a constructional element and method for the manufacture of such a structural element. Therefore, the claimed invention is not obvious to a person skilled in the art.

Accordingly, the invention defined in claims 1-25 is novel and is considered to involve an inventive step. The invention is industrially applicable.
